LOCAL BRIEFS

A. S. Buzzell of Bangor made a brief visit to Augusta Friday on matters of business.

Edwin Stone of Biddeford was in Augusta Friday on matters of a business nature.

Rev. and Mrs. Clayton D. Boothbay have been in Bangor for the past few days in attendance upon the convocation lectures in that city.

Friday morning's cold wave gave a temperature of from 12 to 16 above zero at 7 o'clock and was followed by one of the ideal days of the winter.

The Constant Workers of the Penney Memorial church will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon with Miss Ruby Ward, 115 Bangor street. A full attendance is desired.

People who are still displaying their Christmas decorations of wreaths and other designs of evergreen, will do well to remember that according to all ecclesiastical rules these should be removed by the coming Sunday.

If all the boats that are being planned this winter around the stove in the clubhouse of the Augusta Yacht Club take definite form and are launched on the waters of the Kennebec the coming season the fleet will have several additions, for some of the gasoline skippers are talking strongly of building, and the talk seems to center on the subject of speed boats. One member said yesterday that it could not be said whether any speed boats would be built or not, but whatever the case the boys were having a lot of fun talking about it.

TOM THUMB WEDDING

ONE OF THE PRETTIEST SPECTACLES OF YEAR

Universalist Church Crowded on Friday Evening to See the Little Folks—Reception in the Vestry Follows "Wedding"

The Tom Thumb Wedding, given at the Winthrop Street Universalist church last evening was a most brilliant and elaborate affair. Sixty-three little ones took part in the production, the church being crowded.

At 7:30, Mrs. Karl B. Sturgis, the organist of the church, began a recital lasting 30 minutes. At the close of the recital the distinguished guests began to arrive, each couple being announced together with an appropriate "toast," before a diminutive usher led them down the aisle and conducted them to a seat on the platform.

MASTER WALTER RIPLEY
The Groom.

Then, all the guests being seated, came the ribbon bearers, carrying wands linked together with ribbons, taking their places in the aisle. The organ gave the opening notes of the Wedding March and the church quartet sang the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin as the wedding party entered the church and took their stations on the platform. The happy couple being solemnly wedded in the "iron bonds of wedlock," and the ceremony finished the entire company proceeded in processional around the church and out.

After the arrival of the guests, and preceding and following the ceremony, Miss Farrar, Caruso and Madam Sembrich gave selections.

The decorations were beautiful and unique, and every member of the wedding company was in full evening dress. Following the ceremony the wedding party and the public (such as could get in) adjourned to the vestry where a reception was held, and the public had opportunity to examine the little ones at close distance.

Bride's Gown and Others

The bride's gown was white crepe de chine with spiral flowers of Oriental lace and court train.

The bride's veil was of lace caught on either side with tiny sprays of paper white narcissus. She carried a shower bouquet of the same flowers.

The maid of honor wore a gown of yellow silk with lace over dress with trimmings of ribbon and yellow flowers. She wore a cap of silk and lace, and carried a bouquet of jonquils.

The bridegroom was very cunning in the customary dress suit.

There were six bridesmaids as follows: Charlotte Carlton and Vivian Leighton, wore empire gowns of blue silk with trimmings of lace and ribbon and large blue picture hat. Hazel Page and Elizabeth Fulton wore empire gowns of green silk trimmed with lace and ribbon and green picture hats. Lucile Gentner and Beverly Hewins were gowned in pink silk with ribbon and pink picture hats. The tiny ring-bearer, Warren Malcolm, wore a suit of white poplin hand-embroidered in blue and carried the padlock on a cushion of silk.

MISS MILDRED DIXON
The Bride.

The eight ribbon bearers wore dresses of white voile with pink ribbons and rose buds, and white caps with bows of pink ribbons.

The six little ushers wore dress suits with white gloves and patent leather pumps. Each wore a white pink.

The two little pages were very cunning in white olive twist suits.

The little flower girl, Edith Stebbins, wore a lingerie dress of white over pink silk and carried a large basket of pink rose petals.

IRVING E. VERNON NAMED FOR BANK COMMISSIONER

Governor Curtis nominated for the office of bank commissioner, Friday, Irving E. Vernon of Portland. If confirmed by the Court, he will succeed Harry M. Smith of Bangor, the present incumbent of the office. The salary of the office is $2500 per annum and the commissioner has the authority to appoint his own deputy.

Irving E. Vernon is an attorney and has been an active Progressive. He was during the 1914 gubernatorial campaign and is at the present time, chairman of the Progressive State committee.

It is said that Mr. Vernon had the practically unanimous recommendation of the Progressives of Maine and it is known that the Progressives in the Legislature circulated a petition to the Governor asking for his appointment to this office. Apparently he lacked the unanimous support of the Democrats of Maine, for the corridors resounded Friday morning with Democratic growls of disapproval of the nomination.

The nomination of Mr. Vernon for the office of bank commissioner is spoken of in many quarters as part of the price paid the Progressives by the Democrats for their aid in the joint convention. The action of the Progressives at that time gave to the Democrats the election of the secretary of State and the seven members of the governor's council. It has been thought that the officials of State, librarian and bank commissioner would be given to Progressives in return for this aid. The nomination of Mr. Vernon would seem to bear out the prophecies that have been made in this connection. The nomination also justifies the Progressive campaign of 1914, for already by the grace of Democracy, the campaign has resulted in the nomination of the State chairman to a State office.

Yet many of the members of the Legislature are wondering what affect the nomination, which is so bold a departure from usual practices of party patronage, will have upon Progressives throughout the State when they have it brought to their attention. One of the tenets of Progressive doctrine has been political action free from petty political games, such as trading of influence, and loan of voting power in one way or another; whether a political trade was made by certain of the Progressives during the convention or not, it appears that there was and the nomination, if not a tacit acknowledgement of the trade, is pronounced to be at least indirect in view of the circumstances.

When Augustine P. Libby of Merrill, a Progressive, left his seat in the convention allowing the Democrats to elect their nominees because of his absence, Irving E. Vernon was in the State House. He had been very active in the corridors and when the question as to Dr. Libby's whereabouts was asked, it was said that he was in one of the corridors in conversation with Mr. Vernon. Circumstantial review of the convention probably does not, therefore, convince sincere Progressives that no trade was made.

One Progressive when asked about the nomination Friday morning said, "It is no surprise to me." Another Progressive member, however, said that if there had been any trade he was not a party to it and knew nothing about it, but would not deny that he believed something more than the
